New Technologies, New Technical Skills

We are currently witnessing a new industrial revolutions – with the exponential evolution of technological advances, jobs are disappearing and new jobs are emerging across all sectors. All of this was further accelerated with the development of the Covid-19 pandemic, which drove many professions into the digital sphere.

YEP MED trained 32 people on administrative processes in international trade

The course, which focused on administrative processes in international trade, prepared the mentors and teachers of the YEP MED training programmes in the use of the simulated practice enterprises methodology. This methodology, which taught through the concept of "learning by doing", had as an objective to ensure that the students that will complete the occupational training courses in the coming months received training from professionals and teachers that were well skilled in the simulated environment.
